

LANA SCOLARO

Lana Scolaro was born in London, United Kingdom, on Dec. 27, 1994. At a very young age, her parents had her in guitar lessons after school every day. Lana started out playing in school musicals, which eventually lead her to playing in the honours orchestra, at high school in London. That is where she found her love for writing music. During the summer of 2012, Lana took a leap of faith and relocated to New York, where she would later attend Parsons the New School for Design. While attending the institute, she decided to pursue a full-time career in music. She cut her teeth doing open mic's and showcases, which also helped to build up her local buzz. Each summer, Lana had spent on the island of Ibiza, Spain, surrounded by many well known DJ's in the world with whom she worked on music production using Ableton Live. In 2013, Lana attended Point Blank Music School in Ibiza, where she increased her knowledge of further production. Lana then started to create mixes posting on Soundcloud and Mixcloud; her buzz inevitably followed and she was later discovered by The Books DJ Agency in London and Splash Life Booking in Los Angeles which lead to several tour placements with hip hop artists Chanel West Coast, Lil Wayne and DJs such as Luciano and Bob Sinclair. From this point onwards, a strong partnership developed, this seemingly overnight success, also landing Lana her first production deal, with Extensive Music. In addition to all of the performances and music releases, Lana Scolaro has also racked up 8 awards from award shows in Europe. Lana's musical influences are David August, Tale of Us and Solomun, to name a few.

“While Lana sometimes finds playing in front of a huge crowd ‘a little nerve-racking’ and travels around the world under intense pressure to perform well, Scolaro still feels that she has tapped into her life purpose as a music producer and performer”
